ROME June 7—The 59 year estrangement between the Roman Catholic church and the Italian government formally came to an end today when Premier Benito Mussolini and Cardinal Gasparri papal secretary of State exchanged ratifications of the Lateran treaties providing for complete reapproachment between the Vatican and the state

The head of the Italian government and the official representative of Pope Pius XI met in the congregational hall of Cardinal Gasparri's private apartment in the Vatican It was the first time that Premier Mussolini and the first Duce in almost 60 years that any Italian government official had set foot inside the walls of the Vatican palace

Motors to Vatican Hill

Premier Mussolini escorted by his aide de camps motored to Vatican Hill from the Chigi Palace shortly before 11 o'clock this morning In historic St Damascus courtyard of the palace the papal Swiss guards dressed in their traditional mediaeval uniforms rendered the dictator military honors and he responded to their greeting with a brisk salute

There were only a few people gathered in St Peters square when four automobiles bearing the Mussolini party arrived No troops were present

As the cars drew up the people broke into an excited cheer A little group of policemen escorted the premier who was dressed in his official uniform He was accompanied by Minister of Justice Rocco Minister of Finance Mosconi and Undersecretary Giunta

Ceremony Brief

The premier was taken into the presence of the papal secretary of state who was awaiting his arrival in the Congregational hall a large severe room almost devoid of ornament

First Cardinal Gasparri read the papal credentials aloud in which for the first time since the break between church and state in 1870 a pope alluded to the King of Italy as 'Our beloved son'

Following this reading the treaty concordat the financial convention between the Vatican and state and the formal ratifications of the Lateran accords were exchanged

Documents Elaborate

The same group of church and state officials was present as on Feb 11 when the conciliation treaty was signed The premier was assisted by the officials who accompanied him to the Vatican Cardinal Gasparri by Monsignore Borgongini and Pizzardo and by Francesco Pacelli the barrister who acted as intermediary during the negotiations

Each group—church and state—consisted of about half a dozen members The premier's suite included Signor Serretti, chief of the Italian

Under the terms of the agreement the Young plan will become effective in place of the Dawes plan on Sept 1

After the accord had been read behind closed doors the portals were opened to admit the correspondents at 5 30 o'clock to watch the delegates sign

Belgium First to Sign

Belgium was the first to sign the English text

Germany was the first to sign the French text

The signing of this historic document solves a problem that has vexed Europe for nearly 10 years

The Paris reparation conference began here on Feb 11, with England France Italy Belgium Japan and Germany officially represented and the United States unofficially represented

Owen D Young and the famous American banker, J P Morgan, headed the American delegation with two deputies Mr Young was made chairman of the committee of experts, which dealt with the problem

Much Confusion

The task of reading the lengthy, detailed report was begun shortly before 5 o'clock

There was much confusion with reporters and photographers filling the corridor and the floor littered with lighting apparatus for the cameramen Many tourists gathered in hope of getting a glimpse of the notables Porters carrying the baggage of departing delegates had to fight their way through the jam

Curtain Takes Fire

Some confusion was caused when a curtain caught fire from a moving picture sunlight arc light It was hastily extinguished

There was excitement in the meeting room when the curtain began briskly blazing The experts jumped up from the conference table and watched the hotel employes put out the blaze with fire extinguishers then they resumed their places preparatory to begin signing the agreement

Cardinal Gasparri then signed the check and turned it over to the group of smiling cardinals who stood by.

Harding High Graduates Receive Special Recognition for Outstanding Records

...ngs of the class song, the ... of which were composed by Miss Jane Guthery, James Reed, president of the Senior class, addressed ... hors and seniors and spoke at ... to the audience of about 1,500 ... and friends of the classes.

In his talk, Reed said: "Graduation to some, means one thing, to ... a different thing. It should ... one common thing to us all ... that we have reached the ... of 12 years work in the public ... of a great and powerful na- ...

It means that some of us must ... jobs and apply our knowledge ... our whole souls and minds ... greatest productivity. To others, it means college, whose same purpose ... desire for success.

"All minds need a constant spur ... examination—to self criticism, ... to a higher and finer self- ... Therefore it is necessary ... use our education to bring ... effect."

As a final word to the Juniors he ... "I want to say to you, ... fellowship and friendship, ... upon the true democratic spirit, ... free from cliques and clens ... carry on the spirit of the Class ... Harding High school, and ... make it better, and may success be yours."

He closed his address by saying, "And to my Seniors, carry on the same principles of love, and glorify ... in happiness and success."

Responds for Juniors

In response to the address by Reed, Jack Elliott, junior class president expressed the occasion as one of happiness and regret "The class of 1929 is not one that will go on record as one of the ordinary kind. Both as a group, and as individuals, it has made a record in all branches of school activities that will stamp it as one of the outstanding companies of gradu- ...

WIN CLASS HONORS

Three of the highest honors awarded to members of this year's Harding high graduating class went to Miss Marie Williamson, (picture at top), who scored the best record in typing proficiency, Miss Jane Guthery, (below at left), who received the D. A. R. gold medal for ranking first in American history and civics, and Miss Lenore Bondley, (below at right), who headed the class honor list with the highest average grade for the four-year high school course.

ates in Harding High history," he prophesied

"Mere book learning, without other equally important assets, is of little value in this modern age. There must be character, industry, ambition, personality and interest in the welfare of others, in order that a man or woman may have complete equipment for a successful and enjoyable life's journey."

He complimented the class by saying that through association, the juniors had found no "road hogs" in the class. In closing, he said, "Permit me, on behalf of the Junior class, to convey our best wishes to our friends, the Seniors, with 'Good Bye and good luck.' May your future be a continuance of your splendid records as students of Harding High school."

Miss Mary Jenkins, a member of the senior class, accompanied at the piano by Miss Kathryn Zachman, also a member of the graduating class, sang a soprano solo, "Your Smile," by Speaks.

History Presented

This was followed by the class history, compiled by Charles Elicker, Alma Ruth Jacoby, Josephine Imbody, Julian Walker and Dorothy Bush. The history is printed elsewhere in The Star. It was read by Charles Elicker.

"Willow Echoes," Samor, was played as a trumpet solo by Julian Walker, accompanied at the piano by Miss Alma Ruth Jacoby.

Bold bad pirates, dressed in all the picturesqueness of the "vanished" race, dug up the class will from a spot designated on a parchment, stolen from rival pirates. The first thing to be retrieved from the treasure hole was a pair of knickers, marked E. Humphrey Shade.

James Shipley acted as pirate leader, with Robert Hochstetter and John Artopoeus as his helpers. The will, discovered deep in the hole, brought forth many hearty laughs from the juniors and seniors of whom it spoke of with timely humor.

Huhn's "Invictus," was sung by Emerson Russell, of the graduating class, who is becoming known as a capable baritone, accompanied at the piano by Robert Knaus.

The second clever part of the senior class activities yesterday was the presentation of the senior class prophecy. Margaret Forry, as a spinster teacher in a district school, summoned the boys and girls, Mary Jo Stafford, Frederick Merchant, Lenore Bondley, Mary Wires, James Reed, Kenneth Crawford, Howard Bailey, Faye Zuspan and Betty Brown, all dressed in "kid" costumes, to school.

Opening Set to Music

The first part of the prophecy was set to music, sung by the country school class as part of the day's routine. Next, Mary Wires read a short story which included names of senior class members.

John Waddell, as president of the board of education, accompanied by Elizabeth Staker and Selma Schoen, members of the board, visited school Waddell gave one of the typical setstyle graduating talks to the pupils who were enjoying their last day of school.

Items from "The Harding Herald," containing names of seniors, was read by Fred Merchant. Other members of the class of '29 were mentioned through the response to question asked by the "teacher" and a recitation by Lenore Bondley. The pre- ... sentation showed a great deal of cleverness and thought on the part of the participants. Mary Wires, Lenore Bondley, Frederick Merchant, Margaret Forry, and Gerald Zimmer were the committee in charge of the prophecy.

The award of honors, school song and dismissal march, "Men of Ohio," Fillmore, by the orchestra, closed Class day.

The pavilion stage was decorated with American flags, the high school flag, presented by the class of '29, and baskets of spring and summer flowers.

Tonight, the final senior class affair, the commencement exercises, will be held at 8:15 o'clock in the pavilion.

MISS EULA BAIN SOCIETY MEMBER

Through an error in last night's edition of The Star, the picture of Miss Eula Bain was omitted from the group of seniors of Harding High school who are graduating this year as members of the National Honor Society. Miss Bain is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Bain, 611 East Center st., and has been active in the affairs of the high school.

CITY VOTE TO GAIN CONTROL OF HOUSE

Rural Population of Nation Will Surrender Its "Reign" for First Time

would be transferred from its present basis of 47 per cent city population to 60 per cent or more, giving the "city vote" control.

Cities to Gain

During the long fight, representatives from mid-west agricultural and southern states which will lose members and power have fought the reapportionment. They have assailed the 1920 census as unreliable because of the disturbed conditions after the war.

Big cities of the country have long contended that they are denied equal representation in congress. They point to Los Angeles, which has one congressman for 1,200,000 people, while several Missouri congressmen represent less than 200,000 people.

New York City, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and other fast-growing cities all are expected to gain congressmen at the expense of the rural districts of New York, Illinois and Michigan.

ITALY AND VATICAN CONCORD IS SIGNED

59-Year-Old Conflict Settled as Ratifications Are Exchanged

press bureau. In addition to the other prelates, Cardinal Gasparri's party included Monsigner Ottaviani.

The papers signed personally by Pope Pius were printed on beautiful paper bearing the Vatican watermark, and enclosed in a red velvet cover emblazoned with the papal escutcheon and embossed with the pope's signature in gold. They bore the date of May 30, 1929.

The king's documents, presented by Mussolini, were equally elaborate, but were bound in a covering of blue velvet.

Following the formal exchange of ratifications, a protocol outlining settlement of the principal differences between the church and the government was drawn up, and in the presence of witnesses signed by Cardinal Gasparri and Premier Mussolini. This document was duly sealed with the Italian seal and that of the Holy See, and the ceremony, re-establishing the relations severed a generation ago, was completed.

After the ratifications had been exchanged, Cardinal Gasparri read a telegram from Pope Pius XI addressed to the king of Italy, blessing the sovereign and the royal family and expressing the highest wishes for the successful result of the treaties. A postscript blessed Premier Mussolini as the plenipotentiary of the king.

Bronze Door Opened

Premier Mussolini and the cardinal then retired for a brief conference the nature of which was not revealed, and both then consented to pose for photographs on the first loggia of the palace near the cardinal's apartment. No motion pictures were allowed, however.

Despite the announcement that no motion pictures would be allowed, Cardinal Gasparri finally consented to a brief "movie" of the historic scene. It was after this film was made that the cardinal and Premier Mussolini held their 35-minute conference in the former's apartment. Both were smiling when they emerged.

Coincident with the signing of the pacts, the bronze door of the Vatican palace which had been kept half closed since 1870, was flung wide open, signifying the resumption of relations. At the same time, the Vatican post-office was opened for the sale of papal stamps, signifying recognition of the Vatican territory as a separate state, henceforth to be known as Vatican City.

The Swiss guards were formally installed as guardians of the new Vatican territory, and Commendatore Serafini took up his duties as governor of Vatican City.

Await Pope's Appearance

Serafini, personally chosen by the pope, will have little to do in the way of political administration of the new state. His post is of a bureaucratic character, since decisions of importance are vested in a committee of four headed by Cardinal Gasparri.

The governor of Vatican City will take his orders from the committee, while Monsignor Mariani, secretary of the committee, will act as treasury minister of the new state.

Three-quarters of an hour after the ratifications had been exchanged, Mussolini left the cardinal's apartment and journeyed to the frontier of the Vatican territory accompanied by a group of the Swiss guards. He was enthusiastically cheered by the huge crowds massed outside the gates of the palace.

The population of Rome is in a state of tension awaiting definite news whether the pope will make his long-scheduled appearance outside the Vatican grounds this afternoon, as has been reported.

A feature of the luncheon was the Half Minute club, open to any member present for one-half minute. In this time, any senior who had anything to say of his school life, his experiences and his associations with his chums and teachers, was permitted to talk for a half-minute.

James Reed, senior class president, closed the program with a toast, "On the Streets Tomorrow." The school song and class song closed the luncheon.

Infringement of Copyright Alleged in Action Against W. C. Barry

not certain what steps he would take in regard to the action, although he said a compromise would probably be attempted.

He said a representative of Irving Berlin, Inc., was at the theater earlier this year, shortly after he had assumed the management of it. Unfamiliar with the state law in regard to copyrighted songs, Barry was notified that he would be subject to a $100 fine.

By acting through the Motion Picture Theater Owners of Ohio, Barry said he secured a compromise whereby he was to pay $50 and also pay 10 cents per seat for the right to use Berlin's songs. Barry said today that the $50 compromise had not been paid, which was probably responsible for the suit.

The law under which Barry is being sued is the same one that has prevented the use of radios in restaurants and other public places here, as copyrighted songs are often heard over them. As the law applies only to public places, homes are not affected by it.

To Get the Best Out of Life.

Marion High school will this year graduate the largest class in its history. Tonight the 199 members of the class of 1929 will receive their diplomas in evidence of their completion of the local school course.

The number of graduates is significant alike of the numerical and educational growth of our city. The first graduation exercises of the local schools are within the memories of many of our citizens. The class had but two members, one of whom, we are glad to say, is yet among us—an honored and respected citizen. These life-long residents who have attained three score years and more will also recall one commencement at which the sole graduate was a very charming young woman. What a change a half century has wrought—only one lacking to make 200 graduates to fill one of fifty years ago!

Some of tonight's graduates will enter industrial life; some will become interested in commercial activities; some will follow a profession and some will fill the noble mission of being real wives and mothers.

No matter what the ambitions, hopes and desires of the various graduates may be; no matter what lines they may follow, they should tonight come to the realization, if they have not already reached it, that there is no joy in life comparable to that which comes from work and its rewards. No matter what they may have done in the past, no matter how they may have employed their time, tonight they should make up their minds to go to work; whether they plan to follow pursuits along mental or physical lines, they should get to work. The past to the most of them has been largely playtime. That upon which they will enter tonight will be life—and its labors and its pleasures, its tasks and its relaxations, its sorrows and its joys. Life is short at best, and to get the utmost out of it there is need that it be so lived that each day will bring alike its share of profit and pleasure. Participation in neither can be safely deferred to some future time if it is to pay the dividends it should.

Straight from the Shoulder.

Former Attorney General George W. Wickersham, chairman of the commission named by President Hoover to investigate law-enforcement conditions the country over, hit straight from the shoulder, a few nights since in New Haven, Connecticut, when he charged that the citizens of the country who had most at stake in preserving law and order were preaching and practicing open disregard of the laws.

Citing the recent statement of the president, that the most challenging fact before the American people today is the weakening of respect for law, the increase in crime and inefficiency in the administration of public justice, the former attorney general said:

"The peculiar characteristics of the present conditions arise out of the fact that that part of the community who have most at stake in the preservation of law and order, themselves are preaching and practicing an open disregard for certain laws to which they object, apparently without any concern for the effect upon the maintenance of the law in general—especially upon the laws designed for the protection of life and property—the fundamentals upon which rest the continuance of civilized society.

"Even this duty to guard the foundations, no longer is well performed.

"I confess I can not see pass by in our city streets one of the armored cars which have become such a familiar sight, without a sense of humiliation that it has come to pass that money and securities only can be transported in such vehicles, guarded by men with rifles and pistols in hands ready for use.

"One of the matters which the national commission on law observance and enforcement probably will investigate is the amount which private interests pay for police protection, in addition to that furnished by governments—local, state and national—and the number of men employed in that extra governmental work."

We have quoted Chairman Wickersham at some length for two reasons. One is that he has uttered truths which should be recognized as such by all. Why they are not generally so recognized and regarded is one of the mysteries beyond understanding. The very people who have the most to suffer from the breaking-down of law administration and the consequent ascendancy of the criminal world are, by their acts and the force of example, the most powerful enemies of law and order and the most effective aides of crime.

The other reason is that his utterance is so timely when considered in connection with the president's special message of Thursday recommending the appointment by congress of a joint congressional committee charged with making an immediate study of "the reorganization and concentration of responsibility in administration of the federal bureaus connected with prohibition enforcement." The statement of Mr. Wickersham and the message of the president so dovetail, that it is easy to get from the two that an exhaustive study of the problems of prohibition is to be made by the commission on law enforcement and observance and that the administration plans to be in readiness to follow the recommendations of the commission when they are reported.

There is no ground for the assumption that the commission's efforts will be centered on painting prohibition either white or black. The personnel of the body estops such a thought as that. But prohibition, it is evident, is to be considered in all its phases, its advantages and its disadvantages studied, and due credit given to the former and discredit voiced for the latter, without fear or favor.

There can be no escape from the conclusion that there is a relation between prohibition and crime, not so much because of prohibition in itself, but rather due to the abuses to which it has been subjected. The utterance of Chairman Wickersham goes to show that he, as one of the commission, has a very good idea regarding where responsibility for these abuses of the prohibition law largely rests, and we believe that any fair-minded citizen will agree with him that it is the defiance of the prohibition law which is breaking down all law. That admitted, his contention, that those who have most at stake in the preservation of law and order are practicing open disregard for it, must be granted.

There's an old German proverb to the effect that "the most disorderly students make the most pious preachers." If there's anything in it, the Baptists should profit handsomely by the sixty-three graduated by Des Moines.

THE STRONGEST NATION IN THE WORLD.

Hot Weather Diet.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

With the first really hot day every housekeeper thinks of a change of food. Heavy foods and rich desserts seem too much for the season.

There are many delicious dishes which can be prepared with little effort. Salads, chicken and vegetables in aspic, and ice-box desserts add to the tempting qualities of the meal.

Salads made of fresh fruits and cheese, served with thin graham bread and butter sandwiches, form a well-balanced luncheon. Tea, coffee, milk or buttermilk will round out the meal.

There used to be a prejudice against canned foods. During the Spanish war, the "Embalmed Beef" scandal shocked the nation. But that was long, long, ago. Such a thing could not happen now. Canned meats are not preserved with chemicals in these enlightened days. Preservatives are unnecessary, because sterilization and improved methods of canning have done away with the need of drugs and chemicals.

When you buy the products of some known establishment, you may be confident the food is just as pure as the label claims it to be. You know it is against the federal law to falsify a label and, if there were no higher motives than to escape the penalty of the inexorable law, the food would be as represented.

So, for your summer meal you have the choice of many varieties of canned meat, fish and fowls. Then you have delicious cuts of dried beef and veal loaf.

Salads can be made without the slightest trouble. Canned fruits and vegetables are at your disposal. The green stuff for the salads grows everywhere. The salad dressings come in bottles, ready for instant use.

Sandwiches with some of the canned materials for fillings, are quickly made. Delicious cheeses are on sale everywhere. Bottled beverages, above suspicion as to quality, are at your disposal.

You need not worry about the light meals of the hot days. The food manufacturers have made easy provision for you.

What about the healthfulness of these foods? You need give yourself no concern on this score. In many respects they are more wholesome than the uncovered and unprotected raw foods sometimes sold. In nutritional value they equal the home-cooked and prepared foods.

In hot weather you should not overfeed your family. Make up in delicacy and attractiveness what the food lacks in gross quantity. It will satisfy the appetite and be better for the health.

Extra care must be taken on hot days to avoid contaminated food. If you proceed as I have suggested today there is no danger. Food precautions are important always, but particularly so in summer.

Editorial Opinion.

MISUSING THE PRESIDENT.

When the people of the United States elect a man to be their president, they put on his shoulders about as heavy a load of responsibilities and duties as any man could be asked to carry.

Obviously, it would be only common sense for the president's fellow-citizens to see to it that he be shielded from needless interruptions in his work.

But it doesn't work out that way. There are times when the president of the United States is simply used to further the private interests of some individual or group of individuals.

The other day the Drury high school band of North Adams, Massachusetts, descended on Washington in a body. The band was a fine group of youngsters. At its head marched a girl drum major; a remarkably pretty girl, resplendent in a spangled and decorated uniform, wearing a towering white shako.

Presently this band came under the wing of Congressman Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts. The congressman led the band to the White House. There President Hoover was summoned to the lawn. The band played a bit of music for him; and then the photographers gathered about, and President Hoover, stood, wearing a patient smile, between Congressman Treadway and the pretty drum major while pictures were taken.

Now all of this is common enough. But it represents the very sort of thing which the president should be spared.

For whose sake was this bit of business done, anyway? For President Hoover's? Not at all. He can hardly have enjoyed having his work interrupted for ten minutes while he listened to a high school band.

Was it done for the sake of the young musicians? Well, it doubtless made them happy and proud and all that; yet they never would have had the nerve to sweep down on the White House by themselves.

We are forced, then, to conclude that the whole show was chiefly for the benefit of the congressman. Surely the high school boys carried back to North Adams glowing accounts of the way Congressman Treadway led them to the very presence of the president. And the pictures, showing the congressman on Mr. Hoover's right hand—they can be depended on to impress the Treadway constituency, too.

The president is too busy a man to be bothered in that way.—Columbus Citizen.

BUT WAIT FOR THE REPLY.

It's all over. Those who are trying to form the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform may just as well curl up in their corners and forget it, for Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCullough, who hails from Evanston, where the movement intends to establish headquarters, has spoken; and she doesn't think much of the sponsors, apparently.

"Has any of them led in women's club work, in the League of Women Voters, in civic welfare, in professional life, in Parent and Teacher associations, in the Y. W. C. A., in church work, in the Salvation army, in the King's Daughters, or in any other form of woman's activity known to us?" demanded Mrs. McCullough disdainfully in speaking at the biennial meeting of the National Council of North American churches, and paused for an answer—after she had relieved her mind a little more.

Unquestionably the lady was impressive, and until the returns begin to come in from the other side, the national prohibition reform women presumably have done nothing in the way of pursuing "careers" except perhaps by being wives and mothers, which Mrs. McCullough didn't mention as a worth while "woman's activity known to us."

Of course, as a lawyer and ardent Democratic politician, the lady couldn't be expected to take much interest in mere home work of minor importance to the race.

But, on the other hand, as an attorney and as a politician, Mrs. McCullough ought to know that a mere catfish remark is not argument, and that a person doesn't have to be a spotlight star in order to be earnest, possess ability, and be eligible to attempt what he or she may consider a good work for the country. We have no brief for the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, but the report regarding their program, which has been published, indicates that they are honestly seeking light on a most vexed question; and the spirit they seem to possess, rather than the extension of the dry and wet partisans, holds the only promise of reasonable settlement of the prohibition problem in sight.—Detroit Free Press.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, June 7.—Thoughts while strolling: curtained chop houses with those tubby freshly barbered proprietors. Joseph Bickerton, the theatrical lawyer. Nobody seems to wear rubbers in New York. The big muscle man who tears a deck of cards in two on a Broadway corner.

Eddie Cantor's snapping eyes. Like rain-washed berries. Whatever became of flagpole sitters? Marilyn Miller wearing her hair frizzed like Jeanne Eagels. Max Marcin who writes thrilling plays and resembles a small shopkeeper. Swarthy fellows who wear bright orange ties.

Charles Dana Gibson, a Roxbury, Massachusetts, boy, who made good in the city. The blind piano tuner whose daughter is a talented actress. Elisabeth Marbury. And she doesn't like it spelled Elizabeth. Cafe sign: "Come in and eat before we both starve." No late jews of Eugene O'Neal's Shanghai gesture.

The sleek and exclusive long-nosed cars that hide the occupants. New York is no place for a blackberry jam boy. Mrs. Diana Belais, who spends a fortune protecting dumb animals from vivisectors. Similie: "As banal as a cigaret ad." The contented look of pipe smokers. Olin Chester Potter, who owns the Ship grills.

Two-dollar permanent waves. George M. Cohan's Japanese valet. Speakeasies in cool cretonne with doors wide open. And the hot rum places masking as cider shops. The good-natured Sealyhams—so deadly in a fight. A new hotel named for Delmonico. Joe and Margaret Moore.

Morris Aleshire, the art editor. Ping-pong tournaments raging again. Paul Whiteman is an addict, and says it keeps off fat. Joe Laurie, Jr., the pint-sized comedian with the inevitable big black cigar. Insolent "Fives and Tens" crowding the architectural splendor. Ed Swazey here from the coast.

Generally something interesting at Town hall. They even had Swiss Bell Ringers. A talkie, called "The Squall." A pun there somewhere. Boys with oily black hair who appear at sundown in fresh white silk shirts. And call up ladies at intervals to report.

Probably no overcoat of the new century has received so much publicity as the dress coat worn by Mayor Walker when he sticks up for a night out here and there. It won first prize at a men's style exhibit and was thus photographed from every angle. It is a one-button model with satin lapels, a satin collar and satin cuffs. Slightly corseted at the waist, it is particularly adapted to the mayor's slim figure.

New York has two distinct sartorial classifications—the Broadway and the Fifth avenue. Broadway is inclined to exaggerations in cuts, while the avenue clings to something a little more sedate. The mayor leans—or perhaps plunges is the word—toward the Broadway.

Charles G. MacArthur, the young playwright, is the peg for a hundred picturesque and ribald yarns. He is a combination of naive bewilderment, blushing shyness and a ten-minute egg. At times he gives the idea of being on his way for a poke of candy and must hurry back to Mama, and at other times has indulged in fattening two taxicab drivers and a nosey cop—all in good fun, of course. His rowdiness peeps through in his collaborative writing of "The Front Page." He was also responsible for the dinge smash, "Lulu Belle." His career began on a police run in Chicago where they use lysol as a chaser, and MacArthur was no "Rollo" among them. To his confreres he was known as "Hugs." Aside from being one of Broadway's merriest playboys, he is the husband of Helen Hayes, the actress, the lucky fellow.

A new cafe is running a contest to discover the worst annoyance in dining out. My vote is cast for the waiter who snatches the half-finished plate of soup. Personally Conducted Education.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

It is evident that we are going to have some educational changes in this country. On all sides arises the call for reorganization of the school-teaching methods. Some of them need it badly; there is both too much and too little guidance and direction of the pupils' minds. But at present the tendency seems to be too strongly toward mass-production and standardization. Some of the old makers of "Utopias" would have been delighted by this. Running the youth of a country through a mold is a good way to make Spartans, but not to make Athenians. Sparta, with its rigidity, left a name, but not much else; Athens, with its freedom, left an influence that will endure for a geological age at least.

There is a sound core in the comparison that Professor Nevin Fenneman, of the University of Cincinnati, draws, in the Scientific Monthly, between a personally-conducted education and a personally-conducted tour abroad.

"Many employers," he says, "now demand young men with certified educations. Suppose that in order to hold certain positions it were necessary that a man should have traveled. How would it be possible to tell? * * * It is far simpler to demand his certificate, wherein the guide sets forth, 'This is to certify that Mr. G. Trotter was a member of my party from such a date to such a date; that he was actually present at the following places—here follows the list; that to my certain knowledge he entered bodily the British museum, the Vatican galleries, the Louvre, and fifty-seven other museums and galleries, to-wit—here follows the list; that the days and hours on which he absented himself from the prescribed itinerary did not exceed ten per cent, of the whole; that he stopped at no hotels not authorized by the management and that he ate all the meals stipulated except as herein enumerated, and that for the entire tour he is entitled to a grade of C plus.' Of course, with the itinerary once standardized a simple diploma in Latin might be substituted. Such diploma would at once distinguish the man who had really traveled from the man who had merely gone through Europe to observe, learn and enjoy on his own account."

Notwithstanding the divergences that could be pointed out, Professor Fenneman's irony is fairly justified. Let anybody recall his school days and college terms, with their marks, credits, grades, percentages, guesses and averages, and he will admit that there was often more of "pulling through" than of "pushing through." But he will brighten up when he thinks of those brilliant moments, if he had any, during which his mind awoke and acted for itself and even kicked over the traces and shook off the reins in eager pursuit of knowledge and of exercise which seemed to come to it as naturally as air and water.

Those are the moods that mark the real scholar. The man who has them will have no trouble in getting through any school, college or university to which his interest leads him. If he wants a guide, it is only that he may ask questions and seek directions. There are also teachers, they are the very best, who serve not only as indicators, but as fountains of inspiration. When they are found there can not be too much personally-directed education, but such teachers are not keepers of records or givers of certificates. I have known two or three men of that kind to whom I look back. They are the clearest figures of my school days.

It can not be helped, and it is a natural result, but yet it is almost a misfortune that a college or university degree should be valued so high as a social stamp. That is what pulls so many "lame ducks" through.—Copyright, 1929, International Feature Service, Inc.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

Dr. Chang Po-ling, university president from China, has been looking us over. The last time he was here was twenty-one years ago. Freedom granted American children, he says, and the marriage and divorce situation, out of which there seems to be developing a new kind of home life, strike him as the most interesting developments in our country. He puts it pleasantly. Most of us do not see any new home life developing out of the mounting divorce statistics—or out of the new freedom for children.

This same Chinese visitor says the first time he was in America nobody asked questions about China. Nobody cared. Now he says he is so besieged with requests for speeches on China that he can not fill the engagements. This is a good sign. Although we go slowly perhaps we are learning to think in terms of the world instead of in terms of the Tenth ward. Nothing could be more important than for our children to have the kind of education that will teach them to push down horizons and to be world-conscious. There may even be a day when man will be universe-conscious.

Color came into the world a long time ago. But it remained for each passing month of modern times to work out new possibilities. Clothes, houses, and red barns have had the color treatment for centuries. Lately motor cars and still more lately typewriters began to glow like flowers. Now comes the lowly dustpan. You can have dustpans in all shades of the rainbow. Even the kitchen sink is lavender to say nothing of the bathroom floor. Doubtless up-and-coming dealers will be offering hard coal in colors to put into gaudy hand-painted furnaces.

Somebody says there are no new ideas. He wasn't well acquainted with modern publicity and advertising men. A New York motion-picture house wasn't doing well. An advertising man was called in. He hired thirty old couples to sit in nearby restaurants and appear to be deaf. The old gentlemen carried ear trumpets. This is the way it worked. The old lady shouted into the ear trumpet so that everybody could hear, "That's a wonderful picture at the theater around the corner, let's go there." He misunderstood, and his wife repeated her phrase louder.

Then he said "O-ooo, yes! I've heard that's a wonderful picture. Let's go!" The house was filled after that during its entire run.

Twenty Years Ago.

It was Monday, June 7.

Many were killed and 500 were injured when a powder mill at Cracow, Poland, was hit by lightning and exploded.

The balloon, Indiana, descended at Dickson, Tennessee, after breaking the endurance record by remaining aloft forty-nine hours. Twice after the start of the race from Indianapolis it shot up to 15,000 feet, without any ballast being thrown out, and quickly descended each time to a level of about a thousand feet.

Secret service officers made a number of arrests here and at the same time made the statement that Marion was the national headquarters of the Black Hand.

WITH EDNA S. DUTTON

BEAUTIFUL, seventeen, and possessing brains, Peggy Dobeany, Peggy Hatfield, Emma Speed [illegible] heroine of "The Spite Fence" is everything that the flaming [illegible] departed by some authors, is [illegible] she unselfishly puts herself last, [illegible] and always, works until her [illegible] are the shade of a delectable [illegible] lobster, for her finally adopted [illegible] lores the three little Fitz- [illegible] children to distraction and [illegible] prays for the safety of the man [illegible] caused the spite fence to be [illegible].

[illegible] description sounds rather [illegible] Annish, but it really isn't. The [illegible] is entertaining and refreshing [illegible] can be left in plain view should [illegible] Peggy call.

[illegible] story opens at the grave of Peggy's mother, an actress, whose [illegible] leaves the little girl without [illegible] or friends in the immediate [illegible]. She rides back from the [illegible] with the driver of the [illegible] and upon entering the board- [illegible] use of Mrs. Jenkins hears this [illegible]-hearted person telling her [illegible] Ella over the telephone that [illegible] intends to send Peggy to the de- [illegible] on home because she "didn't like [illegible] the young men took up for [illegible]. Incidentally Mrs. Jenkins had a [illegible] disagreeable daughter of her own.

Peggy dons her stage costume of a [illegible] dress in which she had played [illegible] part of the barefooted mountain [illegible] packs her few belongings, in- [illegible]ding three diamond rings, her only [illegible]remembrance from her mother, and in [illegible] disguise sets out to elude the [illegible] boarding house lady. Her wandering [illegible] lands her in the buggy of Pat Fitz- [illegible]rick, who regards her as the an- [illegible]wer to his wife Mary's ad for a [illegible] refined young white girl from the [illegible] country to assist with the housework [illegible] and help mind the children."

Mary, a mountain girl herself, is [illegible]mbitious for her children, takes [illegible] Peggy in and is eventually won by her [illegible] many accomplishments and her win- [illegible]ning ways with the children.

The trials and tribulations of the Fitzpatrick family, Mary's operation, Pat's broken leg, the spite fence, which the millionaire has built because Pat refuses to sell out his home site to him, Peggy's resourcefulness in establishing a soup kitchen at the roadside and right at the very door- [illegible] of the rich man's palatial home combine for an interesting plot.

Flashes of humor are to be found here and there in the book, furnished by Aunt Phoebe, who washes for the quality folks, and Mandy, who worked for Mrs. Jenkins and knew her for what she was.

Von Hoffman Tells Story of Jungle Land

THE ways of the natives of Northern Rhodesia is fascinatingly and most interestingly told in Carl von Hoffman's "Jungle Gods," published by Henry Holt and Co. Soldier, explorer and cinema expert, von Hoffman has a most intimate knowledge of many things no white man has ever mentioned before.

The story tells of the natives of the tribe of Walalas, who live in the Irumi mountain country in northern Rhodesia. Here live the folks whom Captain von Hoffman knows, Chinaldi, the wise man; Blaiera, who could not afford to be a Christian; Thomas, who found it immensely profitable; Chisenga, the witch-doctor whose power was terrible in the land; Wambus, prize head boy of the safari, who had had such difficulties with his soul and all the rest. Wambus had had his soul baked in a porridge and put away in a calabash, so that no person could step on his shadow or cast an evil eye on him or otherwise steal it. Then a goat ate it. At first he was frightened, then decided it was a blessing. His soul now had four legs and could convey itself about. Then a savage wild beast devoured the goat and Wambus died also.

Blaiera desired to be a Christian for it promised such a delightful Heaven where no man had to work and the streets flowed with milk and honey. He went to the missionaries who proceeded at once to the business in hand. "How many wives had Blaiera?" Three, two old ones and one who was young and new.

Then trouble began. Blaiera could not part with the oldest because she was a good cook and he had had her so long that her mother did not want her back and refused to pay more than three chickens for her. His second mother-in-law was of the same mind though she would give but two chickens. This wife was a good worker in the harvest and had once cost five chickens and two goats. His third wife he could not give up because she was young and good looking. It would be nice to go to heaven but not at that price. Only a wealthy man, he decided, could afford to become a Christian.

Colonel Roosevelt Has New Book

COLONEL THEODORE ROOSEVELT, who is slated for the post of governor of Porto Rico, left the manuscript of his book, "All in the Family," with his publishers, G. P. Putnam's Sons, before departing on a hunting and collecting expedition into the interior with his brother, Kermit. The book will be published this fall. "All in the Family" contains a number of hitherto unpublished anecdotes concerning the late Theodore Roosevelt.

Picture Story of Lindbergh

DR. FRANCIS TREVALYN MILLER, historian and economist, whose pictorial biography of Lindbergh will be published soon, believes that the history of the future will be developed along epochal lines of invention and discovery rather than through wars and political administration, as has hitherto been customary. According to his definition, Dr. Miller's forthcoming book, "Lindbergh: His Story in Pictures," is a history of the future.

New Imports Interesting

RECENT imports include "The Letters of Tolstoy and His Cousin Countess Alexandra Tolstoy," translated by Leo Islavin; "The Life and Writings of Alexandre Dumas," by H. A. Spurr; "Ants, Bees and Wasps," by Sir John Lubbock, and "Memoirs of Leonora Christina, Daughter of King Christian IV. of Denmark." The first mentioned includes letters written over a period of 46 years revealing the complex and deeply sincere character of this great writer; the inner, personal workings of his thoughts and the tremendous force that was behind his genius.

The fascinating life of Dumas, whose influence was so wide and far-reaching must, because of its vividness and the intensity with which he lived and wrote, have a wide and far-reaching appeal.

Sir John Lubbock is recognized as one of the greatest of etomologists and his book has had, since 1882, 37 editions.

The memoirs of Leonora Christina, written during her imprisonment in the Blue Tower of Copenhagen, make up one of the most entertaining and historically informative manuscripts of the seventeenth century. They portray a vivid picture of the political and social life of the court of Denmark at that time and give the intimate thoughts and feelings of this great lady, who rather than desert her husband, remained in prison for 22 years.

Hollister paused again It seemed ... Vanardy that he was taking a long time broaching his subject He was not particularly interested in the exploits of Parson Jim

Suddenly as he waited for the older ... to go on something drew his ... to the window For an instant ... he gazed sharply at the exposed ... between the shade and the sill he fancied that a pair of eyes were ... into the room The impression was vague and fleeting and Hollister's next words gave him something ... think about

Let me tell you a secret said the ... man For a time several years before Craig bought Tuckaway camp Parson Jim lived there with his gang of counterfeiters The parson was supposed to be a wealthy leisurely gentleman and his helpers masqueraded as ... servants One night a little army of secret service men swooped down ... the place surrounding the house How Parson Jim and his accomplices ... away remains a mystery to this ... There have been babbling like an old dotard about things that don't ... concern me in the least

But they do me declared Vanardy emphatically He had followed the last part of the cripple's story with great ... and something that puzzled me Just one thing more Was Parson Jim's laboratory in that part of the house ... is now called the blue room?

I am not sure Hollister gazed languidly into the fire My man could probably tell you I haven't a very good memory for such things'

For a few moments Vanardy sat pondering, what he had heard I am ... sadly indebted to you Mr Hollis... ter he murmured 'Some day I hope——

He paused and leaped out of the chair His glance, wandering carelessly about the room had once more fastened on the narrow space between the shade and the sill and this time he knew that his imagination had not deceived him For just an instant a pair of eyes and a portion of a face had been limned against the pane and the brief glimpse had been followed by an instant recognition

'Whipple?' he muttered a little dazed and not quite sure that he had identified the face correctly and then to the cripple's amazement he rushed from the room With wind and rain beating against his face, he ran around the house to the window at the side A hot fierce rage long repressed flamed within him as he hurried along manifesting itself in a burning sensation in his fingers and a desire to tighten them around the throat of the repulsive creature whose face he had glimpsed at the window

He reached the point where the vision had appeared but no one was there For a time he ran around in circles, stumbling against rocks and shrubs then realized that further pursuit would be futile for in the darkness the other man would have no difficulty eluding him His rage had cooled down somewhat when he rejoined the cripple beside the fire place

What on earth struck you all of a sudden inquired Hollister

Vanardy laughed ruefully 'I thought I saw some one at the window some one whose face was familiar to me

The other regarded him intently then shook his head incredulously You have a very vivid imagination Phantom I think you need sleep to steady your nerves

That's a very good prescription Mr Hollister If permitted I shall be asleep in the blue room in a little while Thanks for the information you gave me about Parson Jim

They shook hands and Vanardy walked out As he set his face against the storm turning in the direction of Tuckaway camp his fingers tingled unpleasantly from Hollister's limp clammy handshake The same sensation had come to him when they shook hands the night before Then as now it had brought him an indescribable chill as if he had come in contact with something from which life had flown

Anyhow I've learned something he told himself as he hurried along Interesting to know that Parson Jim quit the counterfeiting business because of an accident to his hand'

Cullgore Receives a Shock

The old grandfather clock in the library at Tuckaway camp chimed the midnight hour

At the first stroke Stanhope stirred nervously in the chair he occupied before the fire The cigar dropped from his trembling hand and he reached down with his right arm to pick it up It was a rather long reach and the movement caused his sleeve to wrinkle back exposing several inches of wrist With a start he pulled the sleeve down and glanced uneasily at his companions in the room

Nerves on edge tonight Stanhope' drawled Harry Bell regarding him with an amused expression It has been apparent for several hours that the lawyer was ill at ease This spooky old dump is enough to give any one the jumpins especially if something is preying on your mind

Just what do you mean by that demanded Stanhope, bristling instantly

Bell laughed sardonically Nothing in particular old top If what I said means anything to you just forget it I'm a magnanimous soul don't like to hurt anybody's feelings Really though Stanhope you ought to be like me Life is a lot easier when you throw conscience and principles into the discard

I wouldn't boast of my lack of conscience if I were you said the lawyer with dignity, having recovered a semblance of his composure We haven't forgotten that you were alone with Craig the night he was murdered'

'There you go again'' exclaimed Bell good humoredly 'Tell me, Stanhope isn't it better to have no conscience at all than to have an uneasy one like yours? I leave it to you Cullgore Which one of us looks the guiltier Stanhope or myself

You are talking rot both of you growled the lieutenant getting up and beginning to pace the floor Cullgore had been in a gloomy mood ever since, about three hours ago, he telephoned police headquarters in New York and learned that the Gray Phantom had been arrested The fact that he had been cheated out of his life's ambition and that some one else had accomplished the capture of the celebrated rogue came as a heavy blow to the lieutenant's pride It was all the harder to bear by reason of the fact that since the Phantom's marvelous escape in the early morning Cullgore's last remaining doubt as to his guilt had vanished

Cheer up Cullgore' said Bell cheerfully You may get your hooks into the Phantom yet Are you sure there is no mistake about his arrest

Mistake' How could there be''

Oh there's always a chance for a slip-up where the Gray Phantom is concerned Whenever you think he is there he is somewhere else I would not be a bit surprised to see him walking on us tonight

You're dippy snorted Cullgore If it wasn't such a bad night I'd call a day and beat it back to New York

So should I said the lawyer after listening for a moment to the beat of rain and wind against the windows I can't see that there is anything more for us to accomplish here

We may have another mystery on our hand in the morning Bell suggested One of us may be dead before daylight You can never tell what's going to break in a place like this

Stanhope reproved his flippancy with a stern glance

Wish you wouldn't look at me like that said the irrepressible Bell You make me almost as nervous as you are yourself Since we can't get back to New York tonight and since none of us seems inclined for sleep why not have a common sense discussion There's something that's been bothering me all day Cullgore Why do you suppose the Gray Phantom telephoned you this morning, that he would be back here before night'

Search me Anyhow what difference does it make

You're said to yourself that the Gray Phantom never does anything without a good reason

I don't see what good it does to speculate about his reasons in this particular instance the lawyer pointed out We know he is under arrest and will not return here

Bell lifted his brows That reminds me of something Stanhope While Cullgore was at the telephone this morning you hinted that maybe William killed Craig

The lawyer frowned 'That was just a hazy conjecture I didn't really mean anything You will admit however that Williams guilt is within the range of possibilities

I'll admit anything, said Bell I'll even admit that one of us may have killed him He laughed softly as the lawyer gave a start By the way Cullgore, still think the Phantom did it'

If the Phantom didn't, who did?

Well there's one person that nobody seems to have thought of in that connection but who in the ordinary course of events would have been suspected at the start As far as we know there is only one person who profited by Craig's death and that's the person who will be spending the money I mean Julia Wayne his niece

Cullgore who had been pacing the floor stopped abruptly You're crazy' he muttered

I'm talking hard sense Craig left his money to Miss Wayne because he wanted it to stay in the family and there was no other relative he could leave it to Miss Wayne was in the house the night he was murdered If Craig hadn't died she might have had to wait for the money a good many years How's that for a motive

Is absurd declared the lawyer emphatically

You say that only because Miss Wayne is a nice girl and a stunning looker If Craig had willed his money to a young blade with a taste for champagne and a weakness for the cutes in the chorus you would have jumped on him at once I'm not saying Miss Wayne did it you understand I'm only exercising my imagination and trying to entertain you two Especially you Stanhope You need a flow of bright chatter to soothe your nerves

Stanhope glared at him and muttered something under his breath

I see you don't like my idea observed Bell genially All right here's another I got my inspiration for it out of those woozy letters Craig received before he died There was a certain name mentioned in one or two of them—Jack Frey

Stanhope shrank back in his chair as if he had received a physical blow Cullgore snorted contemptuously

Just rave on Bell he muttered It seems to amuse you

It does Bell admitted 'Sorry to see that it distresses our friend Stanhope though What about it, Stanhope? Don't you think there is a possibility that Jack Frey is the murderer'

The lawyer steadied himself Ridiculous! Jack Frey is dead

How do you know that?

The question was spoken in soft, almost playful tones but it exerted a terrifying effect on the lawyer He trembled violently and his eyes fell beneath Bell's steady smiling gaze He tried to speak but only an inarticulate stutter came

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

Mother Graham's Tantrum Subsides

In Queen Elizabeth had been told that someone was to affix her signatures to papers of state she could not have been more royally affronted than was my mother-in-law when I told her that I had given a set of household keys to Katherine

For a second she stood absolutely motionless as if stunned Then she drew herself up to her full height while what Dicky irreverently calls her "red to the stake" look came into her eyes

I thought there would be something like this she said slowly and with quite terrific dignity You are turning over the authority of this house to Mrs Bickett not to me Of course you are within your rights the farmhouse after all belongs to your father It is not Richard's we all are here really upon sufferance But Richard Second is my grandchild and I have taken the burden of care of him for years It seems to me that common decency would have kept you from offering this insult to me even if you do deem me too old and senile to be capable of directing a household any longer

Much of her tirade was irritatingly familiar to me but there was a mournful cadence investing the words 'old and senile" which clutched at my heart and sent me to my mother-in-law's side with a genuine affectionate sympathy In her ordinary tantrums I keep my distance and pray for grace not to answer her sometimes maddening strictures I always know that any show of softness upon my part would only feel her ill humor and egg her on to further scolding But I felt that upon this occasion she was in a distinctly different mood one bitterly grieved and acting upon that intuition I took her into a close and living embrace before she had fairly finished speaking

'Please' Mother'' I said softly Don't be angry at me when I'm going away tomorrow Please believe that I meant absolutely no disrespect to you In giving Katherine a set of keys You are the chatelaine of the farmhouse She understands that, and so does Katie But she will relieve you of much of the burden of seeing to things — you know you ought to have your naps regularly and your drives—and Katherine will always be at your call But it really isn't fair to her or to me to have only the one set of keys She might need something for Junior for instance very badly some time when you were asleep or away Won't you see my position and realize that there is no thought of disrespect to you or of weakening your authority'

She had slumped against me and was softly weeping the childish tears of old age But at my query she straightened and got back a face and smile a bit grimly But with perfect good humor It was the sullen transition which so often marks Dicky's tantrums and I realized anew that it was as much an inheritance of his as the shape of his nose

You should have been a lawyer Margaret she told me But after all with such as I illness it is a very small matter to bother about Let her have the keys by all means if trailing them around will make her feel any better

Of course I will speak to Katie I said hastily and left her——

You will do nothing of the kind she retorted promptly drawing herself up to her full height When I need anyone's assistance to manage that as I'll let you know You'll find a different girl when you come back in the spring All I ask is that Mrs Bickett does not attempt to interfere with my discipline'

Oh! I'm sure she won't I said hastily choking back a laugh at the remembrance of the plan of campaign which my little kinswoman had smilingly outlined to be me but a day or two before

'The only possible way of getting along with Mother Graham is to let her hold the big doll all the time Katherine had said 'Once she is convinced that she is doing that she is most tractable Katie and I understand each other She knows that she is to keep on with the tactics you have used so successfully She is never to dispute an order Mother Graham gives her but she is to come to me as she always has done to get to find out whether it is possible to obey it or whether she must use judicious camouflage'

With the remembrance of Katherine's words and my knowledge of her infinite patience and resourcefulness I was able to make my assurance as to her non-interference sound most convincing and my mother-in-law nodded gayly

You just leave everything to me she said with a satisfied little smile You can go away with not a single worry on your mind about things here And the Lord knows you'll have enough to worry you in there That Veritsen man by himself will be enough to send you to an insane asylum if you don't look out''

She was looking at me skittishly and I felt the hot blood rush to my cheeks at her reference What would my terrifying mother-in-law say next'

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M LEWIS

TODAY was Friday and I would of felt a little better than I do if school hadn't let out because then Saturday would of been a holiday A fella don't have any holidays during vacation We didn't have a holiday on decoration day and we aint going to have one on the fourth And I have not got any spondulix for the fourth yet I got up and let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth and put on my britches and went down and when I got out in the yard my grandfather was out there digging worms to go fishing with and I asted him why he didn't dig some under my aunts window and he twisted his head and looked at me and grunted and went on digging The last time he dig worms under my aunts window she poured a bowl of water over him and then lumped him on the head with the bowl I asted him if he knowed any way that I could earn some money for the fourth and he stopped digging and held the spade with one hand and his back with the other and said The fourth what' and I said The fourth of July of course Then he started diggin again and didn't say anything till he found a worm and then he said he had all the worms he needed and didn't know He said money was offal tight these days I told him I wouldn't think it was if I was getting a pension and didn't have to work for it Then he said he would think it over and let me know I told him that if I hadn't crawled into the barrel when Sand mountain caved in funeral would of cost a heap of money and I ought to get something for saving my family all that money Then he said he would speak to my father about it It don't look good to me

We all went down to Sand mountain because all of our folks had told us to never go there again, and when we were sliding down the sandy side of it a man in the packing house hollered to us, and when we went over to see what he wanted he said to come in and he cut us each a big piece of baloney and told us to chase our selves So we went around past Youngsses house to see if anything had happened to the girls or if they were making fudge or anthing, and they had the sprayer on the hose and had bathing suits on and were running through the spray and squealing It don't take much to give a girl a good time. They aren't very brite. We all sot on the end of the porch and joshed them and all at once Feeble hit the hose with her foot so that it turned right in our direction, and we fell all over each other trying to get away and all of us got soaked I asted Feeble if she wanted us to get peoma and she said "Who's she?" I told her she was a nut, and we went over to the vacant lot and laid on the grass in the sun

MT. VESUVIUS QUIET, LAVA SOLIDIFYING

Decrease in Temperature Indicated; Churches Open and People Give Thanks

NAPLES, June 7—Eruption of Mt. Vesuvius has virtually ended, it was stated today by Signor Malladra, director of the Vesuvius observatory.

Lava still flowing from the crater is solidifying, indicating decrease in temperature, although minor explosions continued through the night, accompanied by ejection of burning cinders.

The churches of the little village of Terzigno, which narrowly escaped destruction, were opened today, and were crowded with people giving thanks for the deliverance of their homes. Pope Pius has sent a telegram blessing the people, and stating that he is praying for them.

Woman Leaps to Death from Window of Train

NEWCASTLE, Ind., June 7—Leaping out of the window of a speeding eastbound Pennsylvania railroad train, an unidentified young woman about 23 years old was killed at Lewisville, near here today.

Reports were received here that the young woman was being taken by a policewoman from Los Angeles, Cal., to Pittsburgh, Pa. She was found dead with a fractured skull and thigh nearly torn off.

The young woman was described as having black hair, dark blue eyes and was fairly well dressed.

It is customary to say you "hate" this and that when you have only a mild dislike. Hate is a hateful word.

RYE BEACH DAMAGE FIGURED AT $75,000

Resort Popular with Marion Residents Hit by Storms and High Water

Property damage that will reach $75,000 has been done at Rye Beach, Lake Erie summer resort popular with Marion residents, by wind, high waters and unusually heavy spring and winter storms.

This is the estimate of George J. Schade, Rye Beach resident of 21 years and property owner at the resort. Numerous Marion persons own summer cottages at the resort, and several of these have been damaged by the raging lake.

Rye Beach has been the hardest hit of any resort west of Cleveland accordingto a survey made yesterday by the Cleveland Plain Dealer. A photograph in today's Plain Dealer shows the Rye Beach cottage owned by Fred Scheff, of Marion, entirely surrounded by water. The beach in front of the cottage has been entirely washed away. Huge trees that have lined the water front for many years are shown toppled over into the lake.

Worst in 14 Years

The Plain Dealer quotes Schade as follows: "Haven't seen such seas in 14 years. You ought to have heard the wind whistle around here. We thought the cottages would be car*ried away.*"

One other cottage at Rye Beach has been nearly carried from its foundation. A flight of concrete steps, four feet high, is buried in water 20 feet from where it originally stood. Water marks on one of the endangered cottages reaches almost to the first floor windows.

The shore line at Rye Beach has been almost entirely changed by the lashing of the waves. Three weeks of constant pounding have broken up a concrete sea wall.

Entire Shore Hit

Rye Beach has not suffered alone, however. From Buffalo to Sandusky the shore line has been changed by lashing waves. What were smooth and sandy bathing beaches last summer are cliffs today. In places the shore line is said to have been cut back 30 feet or more. Other beaches are clogged with driftwood, carried high by the force of the water. In one stretch near Sandusky the shore has been cut away for a distance of five miles.

The storms have been exceptionally severe this year due to the abnormally high water level. Boatmen report the lake to be about four feet higher than ordinary.

Old timers along the lake front say that high water levels come every 14 years. For seven years the lake falls and then for seven years it rises, they say.

BARN AND SHEDS BURN NEAR IBERIA

$6,000 Loss Suffered by Owner and Tenant on Wilson Farm

IBERIA, June 7—Loss estimated at $6,000 was suffered by Hollis Wilson, of Iberia, and C. L. Rinehart, owner and tenant of the Wilson farm located one mile west of here on the Harding Highway, when fire destroyed a large barn and contents, a machine shed and cornerib early this morning. Origin of the blaze is unknown and the loss is partially covered by insurance.

It was impossible to save any of the contents of the buildings as the fire had gained great headway before being discovered by members of the family about 4 o'clock this morning. Contents of the barn included two calves, two tons of hay, oats, and other grain and the sheds held farm machinery and about 100 bushels of corn.

Memories of Marion "Shanty Club" Days Revived as Paving Cornerstone is Dug Up

Marble Block Laid 35 Years Ago Unearthed in Center St

MEMORIES of 35 years ago were recalled to several Marion men today when workmen laying the new C. D. & M. tracks on Center st., unearthed a block of marble.

The marble block, according to A. W. Bryant, local real estate dealer, was placed in the center of Main and Center sts 35 years ago to commemorate the completion of Marion's first paved street. The block although it bore no inscription, served as a cornerstone. The first street paved was Center st.

Today Bryant and several other Marion men were living over old times as a result of finding the cornerstone. The stone, according to Bryant, was placed in the street during the summer of 1894 by the Shanty club, then a thriving social organization of Marion young men.

Get Mayor's Permission

As Bryant recalled the incident of the cornerstone laying today, members of the Shanty club thought there should be some fitting ceremony to observe the first paving in the city. As a result a committee representing the club waited upon Mayor John Dudley to obtain his permission for the cornerstone laying.

The mayor not only gave his consent but promised to aid in the ceremony. Accordingly a time was set for the event.

The stone, according to Bryant, was to be laid at night. Members of the club spent the evening socially as social evenings were passed in those days, and at 1 o'clock in the morning placed the block of marble in the public square, unofficially commemorating the completion of the city's first paved street.

Club Scattered

Of the original members of the Shanty club, only four remain in Marion. Four are dead. Others have scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

A. W. Bryant Relates Account of Club's Ceremony and Celebration

Those shown in the picture are Andrew Sautter, of Marion, Lew Flocken, deceased, Rendo Wallace, of Cincinnati, Thomas Stokes, now in California, A. W. Bryant, of Marion, Ed Thomas, of Marion, William Saunders, deceased, E. K. Uhler, deceased, Elmer Rhoads, whose whereabouts is unknown to Bryant, Arthur Moore, of Galion, Abe Muck, who died several years ago in the House of David, a Michigan religious sect, and Edson Campbell, of Marion. One other person is shown in the photograph. His last name is Wagstaff but after many intervening years Bryant is unable to recall the member's first name.

RUM CARGO VALUED AT $35,000 SEIZED

Accident Leads to Capture of Tug by Coast Guardsmen

CLEVELAND, June 7—A cargo of alleged Canadian whisky and ale, valued at about $35,000, was seized by U. S. coastguardsmen here early today when they intercepted a tug, the Neptune.

It was the largest lake rum seizure here in recent years and but for an accident, coastguard authorities admitted, the Neptune probably would have landed her cargo safely.

Notified by telephone shortly after midnight that a fishing boat had capsized and two men were drowning, Capt. John Daly, of the coastguard service, put out with a small cutter and a crew to rescue them.

Coastguardsmen believe the Neptune had confederates on shore. As the cutter passed the East Ninth st. coal dock a red light flashed from a point on shore. Captain Daly immediately suspected that watchers on shore had mistaken the government craft for a rum running boat and were signaling it.

The cutter put out its lights and cruised quietly. Presently the unlighted Neptune loomed out of the darkness, its engines running smoothly.

"Heave to!" Captain Daly shouted and a few minutes later the coastguardsmen boarded the tug. One man on the captured boat jumped overboard and it has not been learned whether he succeeded in swimming ashore.

A man giving his name as George H. White, Leamington, Ont., was arrested. He said he was hired yesterday at Leamington to run the tug's gasoline engine. The skipper, named West, was the man who jumped overboard, White said.

The Neptune was carrying 500 cases of Walkerville, Ont., whisky and about 200 cases of Canadian ale, coastguardsmen said. Navigation papers showed that the Neptune was ostensibly engaged in the fishing industry and was chartered at Point Clinton, O.

Presentation of the certificates of scholarship was made by H. E. Cook, president of the Bucyrus Board of Education and Dr. Edmund Soper, president of Ohio Wesleyan university delivered the commencement address.

A feature of the exercises was the personal appearance of a number of old graduates on the stage of the auditorium from classes graduating 50 or more years ago. In behalf of the old graduates, Charles Picking, of the class 1872 extended greetings to which a response was made by Clarence A. Assenheimer of this year's class.

REFUSES TO REOPEN CASE ON COAL RATE

Commerce Commission Rejects Application of Traffic Company, Railroad

WASHINGTON, June 7—The interstate commerce commission today declined to reopen the lake cargo rate case by rejecting the application of the Western Pennsylvania Coal Traffic Co., and the Wheeling and Lake Erie railroad, for reopening and reconsideration.

Compromise rates have been in effect since Jan 1 last, by agreement among the railroads, which gives the northern roads a differential of 35 cents a ton on coal destined for lake transportation.

Very Few Embassies Plan To Cut Out Liquor Rights

WASHINGTON, June 7—Very few—if any—of the foreign embassies and legations in Washington plan to follow the British example of "going dry," it developed today.

A day of diligent inquiry among the diplomats found virtually no support for the position taken by Sir Esme Howard that he would not request permission from the state department to import wines and liquors.

A very few of the diplomats for some time have generally refrained from serving liquor at big, official functions.

MARENGO—F. D. Maleer and J. Russell Lloyd were among the students receiving the degree of Bachelor of Commercial Science from the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce, Columbus. Both are members of the Sigma Kappa Phi fraternity.

NEW YORK, June 7—Thirty persons were injured when a driverless two-ton automobile truck coasted down a sharp incline on Amsterdam av., between 120th and 134th sts. and collided head-on with a trolley car.

Force of the collision slammed the trolley car back against a second trolley car, which had been following it.

American Companies Plan Elaborate Communication System

WASHINGTON, June 7—American communication companies are working out plans to circle the globe with wire and wireless service, with special regard to Pan-America, by April 1930, so the president of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. told the senate interstate commerce committee today.

He outlined the proposed work, whereby the United States and Canada will be connected with interior South America. A transandean line will carry the system to the west coast of that country, and a new cable will extend to Madrid, Spain, thence into France and England.

Passenger Trains 'Scrape' Sides at Midland City

BLANCHESTER, June 7—A "clear" signal had today been restored along the railroad tracks at Midland City, near here, following a near-fatal train wreck last night, when two B. and O. passenger trains "scraped" sides.

A coach on train No. 36, Cincinnati to Pittsburgh, jumped the rails and sideswiped train No. 22, Cincinnati to New York, running eastbound on a parallel track.

CENSUS WORK TO BE CENTERED HERE

Marion Expected To Be Headquarters of Eighth Ohio District

Marion will in all probability be designated as the headquarters city for taking the fifteenth Federal census in the Eighth Congressional district, according to a report from William M. Steuart, director of the United States census bureau in Washington.

Under plans outlined, congressional district headquarters will be established at the largest city in the district.

Just when taking of the census will be started is problematical in view the word from Washington that the census and reapportionment bill passed by the senate provided for starting work next November, but this was the house substituted May 1, 1930 and it is probable that this later date will be selected, as all preceding censuses have been taken in even numbered years.

Taking of the census in this district as well as in other Ohio districts will be under the direction of a supervisor recommended by the Republican congressmen and senators.

Mistrial Is Declared in Shooting of Dry Officer

ABINGTON, Va., June 7—The little Cumberland mountain community was split again into opposing camps of public opinion today as a result of the mistrial declared in the case of Deputy Sheriff "Jim" Crowe, charged with the killing of J. M. Kendrick, college freshman, because the officer thought Kendrick and his companions had liquor in their car.

Under the disagreement of the jury Crowe's trial and that of his two companions, James McReynolds and William D. Worley, also officers, is held over until the September term of court.

Oil Situation Expected To Be Central Subject At Governors' Meeting

At Colorado Springs Due To Reverberate with Protests of Western Delegates Against Recently Announced Conservation Policy

—Oil that liquid gold that has much romance and little scandal—into the United States in recent years, is expected to come to the surface when one of governors called to meet at Colorado Springs by President Hoover begins consideration of scenic beauty in the shadow of Pikes Peak the control of the beautiful Broadmoor district is expected to reverberate with vehement protests from many states over the recently announced oil conservation policy of President Hoover and the interior department.

An interstate compact that will regulate oil production is expected to be one of the chief aims of the conference but inasmuch as such a compact would have little bearing upon oil development on public lands the belief prevailed here that the entire oil situation would be thrown open for discussion at the governors conference.

Governors Coming

Governors of seven western states—California Colorado, New Mexico Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Wyoming—have already indicated they will be in attendance personally or send representatives to the conference.

Secretary of the Interior Wilbur has made reservations for a governmental delegation that will include himself Mark Requa L. C. Danner Dr. George Otis Smith and Northcutt Ely members of the federal oil conservation board.

The Hoover conference follows in the wake of many protests from western states against the oil conservation policy of the Washington administration which restricted the granting of lease and permits on public lands. Modification of the original order has not satisfied western protestants. Practically all of the so-called public lands of the nation are in eleven western states.

The general purpose of the conference as outlined in President Hoover's call will be to promote uniformity of the conservation laws of the states affected—a conference the president said that would consider the possibilities of creating an interstate compact in cooperation with the federal government for the better control of drilling and the elimination of waste and other conservation methods in the handling of oil.

Wyoming Leads

Governor Frank Emerson of Wyoming a staunch Hoover supporter in the presidential campaign took the lead in submitting protests to Washington on the Hoover oil conservation policy. He is expected to take a prominent part in the Colorado Springs conference and his attitude indicates that the modifications in the original restrictions made by the interior department regarding leases and permits have not satisfied Wyoming. Following a meeting between Governor Emerson and Dr. George Otis Smith government oil expert in Cheyenne two weeks ago Governor Emerson made this statement.

Some expressions from Dr. Smith indicate a possibility of further modifications.

Governor Emerson however immediately left for Washington with the announced intention of calling on President Hoover and Secretary Wilbur to discuss the oil situation.

Whether President Hoover's restriction of leases and permits on public lands will fall within the scope of the Colorado Springs conference has been a topic of debate in the Rocky Mountain region but the hope has been expressed that the conference may lead to a discussion of a readjustment of the Hoover conservation policy.

Lindy and Anne Found As Their Yacht Puts In For "Gas" at Maine Harbor

Honeymoon Yacht" Anchors for Night Quarter of Mile Off Cape Porpoise, Flying Colonel Declares He and His Bride Having "Dandy Trip"

KENNEBUNKPORT Me June 7 — Colonel and Mrs Charles Lindbergh and his mother-in-law today left Maine in their 58-foot motor yacht and headed east

The honeymoon yacht' anchored approximately a quarter of a mile off Cape Porpoise which is midway between York Harbor beach and Biddeford Pool

The yacht was seen from the Goat Island Light as she was dropping up the Maine coast Natives of this village had put out in a number of boats in the doldrums and the Mouette was headed toward Portland when the summer honeymoon couple hove in sight

Having "Dandy Trip"

Captain Charles Phillbrick of the yacht here said that he was having a dandy trip adding "we are not in any hurry at all" Kennebunkport however formerly was the first port of call for a honeymoon couple as they sailed down the Maine coast provides an ideal setting for a honeymoon with its rocky shores and the beaming sun on the blue water

Captain Phillbrick said of green hills and sandy beaches along Long Island the New England coast is one jump ahead of the Lindberghs

"There is no hurry" he said "there is no hurry at all We have however for Mrs Lindbergh the finest provisions and a honeymoon couple could wish for"

Views of the beaming sun on the blue water and the rocky shores of green hills and sandy beaches along Long Island the New England coast is one jump ahead of the Lindberghs

There is no hurry there is no hurry at all there is nothing to do but bill and coo" declared the white capped skipper of the Mouette according to Captain Anderson the keeper of Goat Island Light who was the first to see the craft as it entered the harbor

Decks to Take Gas

Meanwhile the fleet of wealthy yachtsmen who were in readiness for Captain Lindbergh's arrival put out to meet the honeymoon couple as they passed through the harbor entrance and there was room for four persons on the deck of the Mouette

The honeymoon keepers became excited when after a casual inspection of the trim motorboat he discovered that one of its occupants was Lindbergh and Anne" He quickly called his wife and children so that they might get a glimpse of the world's most famous newlyweds

Colonel Lindbergh who was the sole occupant of the Mouette visible as the craft neared the pier was reclining in the cockpit

Natives of the village had put out in a number of boats in the doldrums and the Mouette was headed toward Portland when the summer honeymoon couple hove in sight

Glad to have seen you" he called as he passed the pointed spruce

The Mouette went about a quarter of a mile offshore but was out to Goat Island Light and dropped anchor Dusk was falling rapidly

Captain Anderson the lighthouse keeper trained his glasses on the honeymooners as they promenaded on the deck of the Mouette arm in arm Then the skipper ran up the anchor light and the mast in the cabin were turned on The cabin lights were switched at 8:45 p m

Asks To Be Let Alone

At this juncture a party of newspapermen on shore put out to examine the Mouette under cover of darkness They lifted the canvas off the craft's name plate Underneath the canvas was inscribed The Mouette

Covering up the name of the boat is against maritime regulation and the vessel could be fined on by the coast guard the skipper would be liable to lose his license and the owner could be fined but it is considered unlikely that the coast guard will take such procedure

Lindy heard the reporters messing around and came on deck complaining with difficulty his anger at the intrusion

Gentlemen he said with precise enunciation it is our desire to be left alone Please do not disturb us again

Return to Shore

The newspapermen obligingly shoved off and returned to shore

The colonel wore his familiar dark blue suit the trousers uncreased as usual

No provisions were taken aboard here The fliers wealthy bride apparently is doing the cooking for the Lindberghs never was noted for his culinary skill and the skipper probably is kept busy with taking care of the Mouette

Colonel Lindbergh gave no indication that he was suffering from injuries he received and the lighthouse keeper reported that the bride as seen through his spyglass appeared hale and hearty Reports had been circulated here that she was ill.

BUCKLEY LOSES HIS TEMPER AT HEARING

Declares His "Persecutor" Will Go with Him If He Is "Railroaded"

CINCINNATI June 7—Attorneys for former State Treasurer Bert Buckley convicted would be bribe and liquor conspirator today had won a slight legal victory in the former public official's apparently hopeless fight to escape becoming a convict in the Atlanta federal penitentiary

Buckley a Dayton man is under sentence to serve two years and six months in jail and pay a fine of $1,000 for his connection with the Cincinnati beer brewers bribery scandal

At a meeting in the United States court of appeals here late yesterday afternoon permission was granted over contentions of government prosecutors to Buckley's attorneys allowing them to file briefs in the Barton case appeal It was specified however that the petitions be filed within a week's time

Loses His Temper

Hareth L Main chief government prosecutor in the case earlier this week had filed a motion asking for the immediate committment of Buckley to the federal bastile and dismissal of his appeal on the grounds that it had not been filed within the time limits set by federal law

At one point during the hearing yesterday Buckley visibly lost his temper for he jumped to his feet and shouted Mr persecutor will go with me if I am railroaded to the penitentiary'

He refused to elaborate on the statement

During the arguments Buckley's counsel again attacked the evidence of John F Eckhart former assistant federal prohibition commission of the Ohio Indiana district who was the government's star witness in the trial of the convicted former official

Wife With Buckley

It was charged that the jury was not allowed to see notes of Eckhart's which he had made of dictograph recorded conversations with Buckley in which it was allegedly shown that Buckley attempted to bribe Eckhart

Defense counsel claim these notes had been altered after they were taken

Buckley's wife who was at his side throughout the six long days of his federal court trial was with her husband again yesterday

After the hearing they entrained for their Easton home

Attorney Takes Blame

Henry A Williams one of Buckley's attorneys said in court yesterday that failure to file the appeal within the specified time limit was the fault of his office

"Buckley should not be made to suffer for this he contended

History Shows Harding High Graduating Class Has Unusual Record of Activities

The history of the class of 29 of Harding High school is one of interesting activities It shows that the school lives of the boys and girls were particularly remarkable for the number of activities in which they had a hand all during their four years as members of high school

The history was composed by Charles Hacker Alma Ruth Jacoby Dorothy Bush Josephine Imbody and Juhan Walker and read by Hacker before the Class Day audience at Chautauqua pavilion yesterday

The history reads as follows

In the fall of 1917 615 boys and girls entered the first grades of the city schools Of this number 498 became freshmen 60 at Central junior high school and 108 at Vernon Heights Junior high school

First Sets of Officers

The class at Central elected the following officers James Reed president Neldon Peacock vice president Jo Smallwood secretary Alma Ruth Jacoby treasurer At Vernon Heights class officers were Fred Merchant president Mary Jo Stafford vice president James Rice secretary and Homer Messenger treasurer In various activities these two groups of freshmen played a prominent part Two plays were given at Central Evening Dress Indispensible and The Public Worrier The class at Vernon gave Aaron Boggs as their play In athletics both basketball and baseball teams distinguished themselves History and science clubs were organized and The Vernon Vim an annual publication was edited by Jane Guthery assisted by Fred Merchant

Then we came to Harding and dropped from high and mighty freshmen in our respective schools to meek and lowly sophomores As leaders we chose Clyde Wandell president Fred Merchant vice president Mary Jo Stafford secretary and Vance Harden treasurer We furnished two debaters for the Harding team Lenore Bendler first affirmative and Jane Guthery alternate

The following members were active in athletics McAninch Perry Keller Garrett Williams Zimmer and Reed

Then we move from the east hall to the west hall and became juniors supposed to be somewhat frivolous and youthful and yet approaching that dignified state known as senior dom

Junior Election

Our officers were John Waddell president Vance Harden vice president Mary Jo Stafford secretary and Orrell Zimmer treasurer Here members of the class distinguished themselves in many ways Football letters were awarded McAninch Garrett Zimmer Keller Ansley Williams Perry and Peacock Basketball letters were awarded Garrett McAninch and Keller In the district track meet Crawford won the mile event Three one act plays were given Romance of the Willows Buttons Joint Owners in Spain and The Grill Eighteen members took part in these plays

In various clubs Junior Inter Nos Roman Senate Girls and Boys Glee clubs and Ye Merrie Players we juniors were found in considerable numbers many funds as officers In these organizations Likewise on the Quiver Junior staff 12 of our members rendered good service Near the close of the year eight members of the class were awarded membership in the National Honorary society namely Evelyn Luckeider Lenore Bendley Margaret Lorry Jane Guthery Mary Jo Stafford Elizabeth Staker Fred Merchant and John Waddell Then to prove that we were really brilliant we finished our year with a banquet to the seniors

In our senior year the most important one of all the class of 29 resulted in the following officers James Reed president Kathryn Zachman vice president Robert Hochstetler secretary and Fred Haberman treasurer

Our first great achievement was the entertainment course bigger and better than ever In debate six members distinguished themselves Elizabeth Staker Dorothy Mackan Helen French Kenneth Crawford Lenore Bendley and Jane Guthery The Quiver Junior was edited by John Waddell and the Quiver Annual by Jane Guthery

Harding won the North Central Ohio football championship Nine seniors received letters Zimmer Perry Harden Williams Wuessner Peacock Ansley Haberman and McAninch Others not receiving letters but doing their part were Snyder Shipley and Travis Basketball letters were awarded Rousch Gillis Walker Lockwood McAninch and Keller

Men in Honor Society

Additional members were elected to the National Honor society in November including Marguerite Alexander Howard Bailey Betty Brown Dorothy Bush Wilbur Chick Harry Dorsey Charles Hacker Vera Jones Richard McAninch Mary McGhee Kenneth Metcalf Jane Smith Joseph Wance Ella Wilson and Mary Wirtz In April Phi Beta Shirley May Chaney Alice Houser Esther Layman Dorothy Mackan Ethel Rowles Donell Shields and Faye Zaiser were installed as members

The Queen of Harding was given as the last play to be taken by James Reed and Jane Guthery Thus for a romantic picture although dull at first presented a most a great deal of realism

In all Harding and other activities Senior ambitions and leadership have the right to our best Harding High we present a beautiful silk banner in red and black as a school flag

At length we have come to Commencement Last Sunday our human laurels were fittingly adorned with the Rev Lawrence A Wood of Trinity Epiphat church as our speaker On Tuesday night we were royally entertained at a reception given by the Junior Friday night we graduate Class commencement address will be given by Dr Ralph Sockman of New York City one of the outstanding speakers of the country Thus the class of 29 passes into history for us it retains a beautiful memory for others we hope some small part has been contributed toward the spirit of Harding High

Bequeath Editorship

In the reading of the class will John Waddell willed Lowell Haldeman the trials and tribulations of editing "The Harding Herald" for next year and Miss Catharine Cheney was bequeathed the work of editing the annual next year Miss Jane Guthery was editor this year These two positions are among the highest in the school activities

ERIE ROUNDHOUSE BEATEN BY SHOVEL

THURSDAY'S RESULTS
Hocking Valley 8 Huber –
Shovel Club 5 Erie Roundhouse 1
Osgood 7 C. D. & M. 4
Fairfield 1 Erie Yardmen 1

BY BOB ELLIOTT

With Bob Gamble hurling his second consecutive victory of the season Fairfield today undisputed possession of first place in the Industrial recreation ball loop as Erie Roundhouse went down before the attack of the fourth place Shovel club by a 5 to 1 score. Fairfield scored three runs in the first inning to defeat the Erie Yardmen 3 to 1.

The Erie Roundhouse defeat was the surprise package of the Industrial league season so far. It was a long drop, all from start to finish with Glen Price furnishing the climax of the program with a sensational one handed catch in right center bold that robbed the winners of at least two more runs.

The trainmen took the lead in the first inning, when Shurrock tripled and scored on Taylor's error. The losers other three runs came in the fifth when Fido Robbins walloped one of Mr. Snyder's offerings for a circuit smash with two mates aboard. The winners scored the fifth and winning run on Homer Tittle's line drive to left field.

The Fairfielders went right after the Erie Yardmen in the initial frame tallying all their runs in this inning. The Yardmen solved Gamble's delivery only once in the seven innings. The Yardmen are now in a fourth place tie with the Shovel club.

The Osgood nine smarting from a defeat by the Erie Roundhouse last week came back strong to hand the C. D. & M. outfit a classy 7 to 4 setback. The winners scored seven runs in the first inning, driving Appleyett to cover. The losers scored three of their four runs in the final frame. Unless something is done in a hurry the Electrics are going to find themselves distinctly out of the running.

Gruber hurled the Hocking Valley to its first triumph of the season over the Hubers by a 6 to 2 score. Huber now has sole possession of the cellar.

PETER MAGNUS WINS 2:24 PACE, BEATING M'KAY'S FAVORITE

BY KARL R. McELROY
Sports Editor the Star

Marion's Short Ship race meeting drew to a close yesterday afternoon with plenty of excitement featuring the three event card and today more than 150 horses were preparing to move on to Mansfield where the closing meeting of the circuit will be held.

The final day of harness racing on the fairground trail was witnessed by the largest crowd of the season. Five fast pacing are scheduled at Mansfield and the 3 days Tuesday Wednesday and Thursday are the big days on the program.

Patchen Boy driven by Cartnal won the feature race Thursday taking two straight heats. The favorite of the race Jackie Coogan with Myers up failed to win a single heat. The Myers horse broke in every heat to be nosed out. The horse finished third in the money. Rhythmic Fool finished in second money by winning the third heat.

Mattie W. the favorite in two of the three heats of the 2:24 pace failed to take a single first place. The race going to Peter Magnus in straight heats. Peter Magnus opened on the favorite at 4 to 5 and in the second heat was a 2 to 5 shot. Mattie W. finished second in the three heats after being marked up to 3 to 10 in the third heat. The final heat was taken by Walter's Daughter of the Leo Phillips stable.

Happy the Great was driven by Van Buren to two consecutive heat victories to cop first money in the 2:18 16 trot. The winner started the race as the favorite but the betting shifted to Quality in the second heat, the horse finishing fourth. Quality came back in the final heat to finish first.

15 SPEED DEMONS TO START IN AUTO RACE

100-Mile Event To Be Held at Akron Sunday, June 16

AKRON, June 7—All highways will lead to the Akron Cleveland board speedway on Sunday June 16 when 15 of the greatest independent speed demons ever assembled for an auto race in the world are lined up for the 100 mile Buckeye Classic.

The big event promises to be the most hotly contested race ever held on a track of this size in this country and never before have a more representative list of speed stars assembled on the same oval.

The greatest of rivalry exists between at least one half score of the drivers and track state and even worlds records are placed in jeopardy. So fast and evenly matched are the majority of the entrants that it is probable that there will be only a fraction of a second difference in the time of the little automatons eligible to start in the big grind.

SIMMONS AND FOXX THREATEN RECORD OF RUTH, GEHRIG

Sluggers Tied at 22 Homers for Each Pair, A's Beat Browns

The firm of Ruth and Gehrig which has held a monopoly on home run hitting in the American league for several years is threatened with serious competition today from Simmons and Foxx an enterprising Philadelphia concern. Each pair of home run twins has a total of 22 homers Simmons being tied with Gehrig for the league lead with 12 and Ruth and Foxx having 10 apiece.

Four boxcars by the Athletics' duo featured the Mackmen's second successive triumph over their western rivals the St. Louis Browns by a 15 to 4 count yesterday. Simmons also contributed two doubles driving in six runs in all and Cochrane batted a pair of triples.

Meanwhile the Yanks winning streak of five games was snapped by Cleveland 9 to 7 because Gehrig was unable to deliver any kind of a blow on four different occasions when a hit meant runs.

The fast flying Athletics now lead the champions by 7½ games.

Pittsburgh increased its lead over St. Louis in the National league to 9½ points when Kremer beat the Braves 4 to 2 while the Cards again lost to the Giants 9 to 4. The latter contest was a personal battle between the rival first basemen. Bottomley with two singles and a home run scored three runs and drove home the other St. Louis tally. Terry accounted for three runs with a homer and a single. Benton and Haid did the throwing.

Brooklyn kicked another one off to the Cubs 8 to 6 half of Chicago's tallies being unearned. Homers by Hornsby and Malone helped the Cubs overcome a four run lead.

Benge pitched another nice game for the Phillies, beating May of the Reds 2 to 0 when Lee Bresco Thompson with Lerian on base bounded into a force for a home run.

Washington apparently had Detroit beaten as the result of a four run rally in the seventh but Hadley was lifted for a pinch hitter during the uprising and Ad Liska, his successor was pounded in the eighth for four runs and the game, 7 to 5.

PRESIDENT GAINING ON ORIGINS FIGHT

Administration Leaders Meet Success in Battle on Immigration Policy

WASHINGTON June 7—Assured f a victory in the farm relief battle President Hoover today appeared to be gaining ground in the senate on his re ommendation for repeal of the national or g be immigrat on law

While the president frequently has declared he would not interfere with the legislative freedom of congress his emissaries have been waging vigorous campaign in the senate for elimination of the debenture plan from the farm bill and for repeal of the new immigration quotas which go into effect July 1 The debenture fight has been won through the activity of administration leaders though the vote may not come until next week

A different group led by Senators Nye Republican of North Dakota an Insurgent and Allen Republican of Kansas a newcomer has conducted the fight to carry out the immigration policy They have met with extraordinary success so much so that a forlorn hope has been turned into a doubtful contest in which either side may win The advocates of the national origins plan however may defeat the president s wishes by filibustering

At the outset of the immigration war only a dozen senators apparently favored repeal of the new quotas With Nye and Allen conducting a systematic campaign for votes recruits were swung into the president s forces until the outcome now is in doubt

Local Traffic Regulation Not Affected by Supreme Court Ruling, Officials Say

Arrests Made Here for "Reckless Driving" and Not for Exceeding Speed Limit, Local Code To Be Changed To Conform to State Law

Recent ruling of the Ohio Supreme court to the effect that speeding is not punishable by law except when shown as proof of reckless driving will not affect the police of Marion officials in enforcing the city traffic code City Solicitor George F Gerwin stated today

Marion's traffic code will be altered to conform to the new speed limit established by the state legislature effective July 1 Gerwin said The present city code specifies limits below those of the new state law

The white court holding is no different than the common interpretation of the traffic rule liability of the driver is said only the state can bring action against a speeder

Heretofore a speed limit ordinance, before merely established a maximum which is considered reasonable driving officers explain However the state court ruled that prior to the application of this law the courts held a case to the effect that 30 miles an hour in a residential district was not illegal if traffic was light and the pavement wide and free from obstructions

It holds one of the most noticeable effects of the supreme court ruling will be the disappearance of speed traps some of which were on wide smooth highways sometimes used as a trap to secure arrests speeds above those specified by law The speeders were then caught and fined in order to swell municipal and township revenues From now on the police must be an adjunct to car for arrests at a rate above that of the by law

A majority of motorists however escaped fully after July 1 when the new Boden law becomes effective

Police have been called to rule on if J W Thompson chief of police said no one had ever been fined here for speeding as the charge was always reckless driving

Depends on Conditions

In estimating a speed limit ordinance, police merely establish a maximum which is considered reasonable driving officers explain However the state court ruled that prior to the application of this law the courts held a case to the effect that 30 miles an hour in a residential district was not illegal if traffic was light and the pavement wide and free from obstructions

It holds one of the most noticeable effects of the supreme court ruling will be the disappearance of speed traps some of which were on wide smooth highways sometimes used as a trap to secure arrests speeds above those specified by law The speeders were then caught and fined in order to swell municipal and township revenues From now on the police must be an adjunct to car for arrests at a rate above that of the by law

Lakewood Case

The Ohio Supreme court this week gave a decision in a traffic case appealed by Jules Fahner city solicitor of Lakewood who was fined for exceeding a 20 mile speed limit last September The court ruled that the state law provides that the width traffic and the general use and maintenance of such road or highway must be considered and that a speed of more than 20 miles an hour could not be used as conclusive evidence of reckless

If the state supreme court had ruled against Fahner appeal it would have made it possible for municipalities to create speed limits that conflict with the state law Under a ruling of that nature speed traps would have been legally sanctioned and the Boden act entirely ignored

On the Streets of Marion

WITH THE STAR STAFF

Extra Trimmings

An aroma faintly reminiscent of the horse stables during the Little Grand Circuit races at the fairgrounds this week could be detected yesterday in the vicinity of the car tracks now under construction on North State st. Straw which had been placed on the partially dried concrete center of the tracks as a curing agent in order to prevent small cracks in the concrete had after the application of a slight chemical deodorizer under a warm sun yesterday and the day before.

Dampened straw treatment is quite common for concrete jobs on a hard surface, which would otherwise dry some time before the deeper pourings would have a chance to dry. This still is very susceptible to large cracks from the expansion and contraction of the wet concrete beneath. The surface of the cement work is always dampened for several hours after the job has been poured to insure ever drying throughout.

Modern Knights

One is not compelled to turn back to the days of old when knights were bold—— you know the rest of it to find chivalry.

The steel clad suitors of the fourteenth century form the basis for much head shaking in this age of high pressure business and speed as columnists decry the lack of respect the modern male is showing toward the so called weaker sex. Things have become so degenerated that if a man extends a small courtesy toward a woman he is either laughed at or immediately slapped.

That may be true in other cities but not so in Marion, at least that was the impression received one day this week of a car filled with loop bus riders carrying a full load of men returning from the races at the fairgrounds.

When the bus crossed North Main st. two women were taken on as passengers with no seats vacant. After paying their fares the women walked down the aisle and immediately two men offered them their seats.

That failed to incite an inspiration in the writer's mind it merely looked like two of the older men had not forgotten their early training.

Then two more women got on the bus and without a moment of hesitation two other men offered them seats. And then another woman stepped into the bus only to be given a seat by a fifth man. That was too much especially since none of the women was of the flapper type.

Chivalry dead in Marion. Not that you can notice it.

Tight Squeeze

MOTORING for pleasure is not by any means enhanced by conditions in Marion's uptown district these days. Squeezing a car through the narrow lanes on Center or State sts. Along the spaces where excavation work is in progress is a task that tests the skill of the most expert drivers.

It is not uncommon for long lines of cars to be held up on Center st., especially at times when the large city buses are parked along the car tracks. One evening this week it became necessary for one of the buses to back down State st. in order that the channel might be cleared for two lines of traffic to pass.

It is a difficult situation and one which will not improve as the summer progresses. Local police officials are putting forth every possible effort to prevent serious congestion and emergency rules prohibiting parking on the streets where construction work is going on has helped to a great extent.

Officials say that motorists can help solve the problem by using Church st. and other parallel thoroughfares whenever possible instead of driving through the central uptown district.

Bread pudding can be made palatable by adding one dollars worth of good things to 5 cents worth of bread.

Read these amazing truths about the difference in Bread

FLOUR — Four kinds of flour are commonly used in baking. They are clear, fancy, long patent and short patent. Clear is the poorest and cheapest grade. Short patent is best and costs most. To get the best short patent flour you cannot depend on brand names because wheat crops vary each season. Only by precise tests rigidly followed can the best of flour be purchased. Of course the best costs more.

MILK — Of the many kinds of milk used in baking only one can be the best, the most nourishing the purest. The best can be determined only by test. If you have growing children in your family you should be sure the milk in their bread is the best obtainable. Of course the best costs more.

SHORTENING — A baker may use any of four kinds of shortening in bread. Only one is best. It must be determined by testing for purity, for nourishment, for baking quality. Of course the best costs more.

SUGAR — You can taste the difference in sugars, corn, beet and cane. You can see the difference in two loaves of bread. The finest of pure cane sugar, selected by precise tests, adds a richer golden brown to the crust of a loaf. And it helps make the quickest, most tasteful toast. Of course the best costs more.

YEAST — Health giving yeast is one of the most important ingredients of bread. It must be always pure, fresh, dependable. Daily tests determine which yeast gives the greatest food value, assures dependable goodness in loaves day after day. Of course the best costs more.

SALT — Salt may be a minor ingredient, yet the best costs $38 a ton and the cheapest $8 a ton. The best salt is pumped from deep wells and refined. Its purity is determined by test. Of course the best costs more.

* * * *

Know what goes to make your bread and you will know why there IS such a vast difference in quality even though reflected by such a slight difference in prices

Two loaves of bread may appear to be alike. Yet the price will suggest a difference in value. What this difference is—how it affects your family's health and your food budget is told here. You can profitably read every word.

WOMEN have been known to say that there is so little difference in bread that the cheaper loaf offers a welcome saving on food costs. These same women are amazed to discover that a difference in price between two loaves of bread may express a difference in food-value, in quality of ingredients, in purity, in baking methods, in skill of bakers, in bakers' ideals of service. These differences in turn showing a decided difference in total food costs and the health of their families.

Food Value Is Important

Intensive research, exhaustive experiments have proved that most cheap bread is lacking in food-value—that it may be merely a filler, without needed nourishment, of doubtful purity, carelessly prepared, baked down to a price and not up to the highest standards of the one food that is "the staff of life."

Ingredients Must Be Tested

Bread ingredients vary in quality, in purity, in food-value according to their prices.

Only the most rigid tests can determine which of the several kinds of flour, milk, yeast, etc., are the most nourishing—offer the most true food-value for your family.

It is only natural that the finest ingredients must cost more than those that are lacking in food-value you need. This added cost must be reflected in the price of good bread. Still it amounts to only a few pennies weekly for the average family. And these pennies are actually returned to you in extra nourishment—in saving on food-costs.

Cheap Bread Cheats

Those who buy cheap bread, thinking it is as good as the higher priced loaf are cheated. Cheap bread, lacking in food-value, fails to build up and so tears down health—fails to return its value in nourishment and so adds to your food cost. What it lacks must be made up by expensive foods for a satisfactory, healthful meal.

Know Your Baker

Every thoughtful mother, every careful wife should know where her bread is prepared and how. Nobody can afford to take a chance by buying cheap bread.

Bowman superintendent of Marion public schools, has announced.

ALUMNI DAY OPENS OHIO STATE EVENTS

Full Day of Activities Scheduled for Saturday at University

COLUMBUS, June 7—The fifty second annual commencement season will open Saturday at Ohio State university with the observance of Alumni Day. Some 2,000 alumni are expected for the occasion.

A full day of activities will have its climax in the evening in the presentation of the Joseph Sullivant medal at ceremonies in the stadium following the traditional Sunset Supper. Awarded every five years to an outstanding alumnus or member of the faculty, the medal goes this time to Charles F. Kettering, Dayton engineer and inventor. It has been awarded only once before.

Fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Ohio State University association, national alumni organization also will be observed Saturday. Formal reunions of 14 classes ranging as far back as that of 1879 are scheduled. Reunion luncheons will be held at noon.

Golf Tourney Saturday

On the morning schedule are the annual men's interclub golf tournament to be played at the Scioto Country club and the alumnae council meeting. Mrs. Marjorie Beebe Hadley, '12, Detroit is president of the council.

On the afternoon program are the annual meeting of the alumni association, the annual varsity alumni baseball game and the Sunset Supper, underneath the stadium. More than 1,500 alumni, their friends and members of the class of 1929 are expected to break bread at the "Sunset Supper."

Results of the annual alumni election recently held by mail will be announced at the alumni meeting. Officers chosen include a new president and alumni member of the university athletic board, to serve for two years and these for one year—first and second vice presidents, treasurer and member of the board of directors.

Morgan To Speak

Officers whose terms expire Saturday are James F. Lincoln, Cleveland, president; H. S. Warwick, Youngstown, first vice president; Mrs. Eugenia Overturf, Delaware, second vice president; R. W. Layton, Columbus, treasurer; and R. E. Heekin, Cincinnati, member board of directors. Nominees for the presidency to succeed Lincoln are Warwick and James C. Lawrence, Minneapolis.

President Arthur E. Morgan of Antioch College, himself widely known as an engineer, will be the principal speaker at the Sullivant medal presentation. The medal will be presented by President George W. Rightmire and Mr. Kettering will respond. Dean William McPherson of the graduate school will trace the history of the medal. Among the special guests invited are the Misses Elizabeth and Jane D. Sullivant, daughters of the man in whose memory the medal was established, who was a member of the university's early board of trustees.

Annual Shakespearean play by the Browning Dramatic Society is the final event on the Alumni Day program. The play 'Winter's Tale' will be given at 8:15 p. m. in the Browning amphitheater in the campus hollow.

When knights in armor embraced what a rattling of metal there was.

it's cheaper . . . .

EVEN if our method of washing your clothes were not more thorough, more sanitary and easier on the clothes than doing it at home, there is still an economy consideration in our favor.

Take the time to figure out the cost per year of your washwoman's wages, her food, the soap you use, the wear and tear and frequency of renewal of wash boilers, wringers, scrub boards, irons, etc. The cost of soap, starch, bluing, clothes pins, etc.—to say nothing of the wear and tear on your clothes. Your answer will be "the Anthony laundry is cheaper." And, oh, how much pleasanter for the whole family. You, your husband and your children after one trial will vote for us.

Today's Review of Yesterday's Grain

CHICAGO, June 7—Interest in grains continued to broaden yesterday, with farm relief legislation the bullish factor, and good buying advanced prices sharply from a lower opening. Wheat values fluctuated in a range of nearly five cents, with the tendency upward and the market displaying a strong tone. Other grains followed the trend in wheat.

Closing prices showed net gains for the day of 1⅝@1¾c in wheat. Corn was 1¼@1½c higher; oats ½@⅝c up; and rye 1⅝@1⅞c higher. Winnipeg wheat prices advanced 1¼@1⅝c for the day. Liverpool closed 1⅛@1¼d lower.

Weakness at Liverpool and reports of good showers in Argentina were responsible for a setback in wheat prices on the local exchange at the opening. Resting orders, new buying on the bullish sentiment over farm relief, the firm tone at Winnipeg, all led to a sharp rally which sent prices back above the previous close. Reports of crop deterioration in the Southwest and dryness in Canada were also factors.

A Washington message stating President Hoover would make a statement led to the belief it would concern farm relief. Shorts covered and prices advanced wildly three cents above the previous close. A reaction followed when the content of the President's message was made known, but despite pressure prices receded only to the point where they were before the rally. Later they advanced moderately, to a strong close.

Sentiment is rather mixed, because of the recent intense bearishness, but with the broadening participation in the markets and the knowledge that the administration is bending every effort to advance prices, there is little disposition to press the sale of grains. Washington news will continue the dominant factor.

Export news was the most constructive in many days, with reports from Winnipeg that 2,000,000 bu at least of Manitoba has been worked overright. The weather forecast is for more rain in the Southwest, where they are already complaining of too much moisture, and indications for the dry sections were not for rain.

Corn closely follows wheat in reflecting the news from Washington. A noticeable effect of this news seems to be a further disposition to hold corn back from market, as receipts have dropped since the turn upward began Monday.

Cash demand continues good, news from Argentina is rather bullish and weather conditions still continue somewhat adverse. Trade in the futures is broadening along with wheat.

In the cash market wheat was nominally 1c higher, with no sales reported; corn, ½c off to ½c up; oats unchanged; rye, dull; and barley, unchanged.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 78; corn, 26; oats, 30; rye, 1, and barley, 2.

GENERAL TREND OF PRICES DOWNWARD

Bulls Start Early Session with Drive on Popular Railroad Stocks

ERIE, NEW HAVEN UP

Rate on Government Securities Take Edge Off Enthusiasm

BY W. S. COUSINS
I. N. S. Financial Editor

NEW YORK, June 7—Outside of the utility stocks and a few of the rails and specialties, the stock market made little or no progress along the line of recovery today up to mid-afternoon

Under the promise of an improvement in the money market, bulls in Erie, New Haven and other popular railroad stocks pushed prices to another high notch; but the treasury department's action in naming a 5¾ per cent rate on its new nine-months' certificates offering the highest in eight years took the wind out the enthusiasm of the bulls. Then the bears started in to hammer rails and other favorites in the week's moderate recovery, and once more forced prices downward.

New Haven sold today at 100¾, the highest in 10 years and 110 per cent above the low price of 1923.
